Ed Mullen executive director of Equality Ohio speaks at The Gathering UCC Church

Ed Mullen

Speaking at The Gathering United Church of Christ

Ed Mullen, the new executive director of Equality Ohio, told members of The Gathering United Church of Christ about growing up in the Episcopal Church and being very happy there until they started preaching about sin and homosexuality. Church then became a scary experience for him.

He left while in college and for a time was “anti-religious”, then worshipped with a Jewish congregation and other churches until he was a candidate for a state post campaigning in Chicago.

That was when he visited another Episcopal Church and knew right away that that was the church for him. Unlike his earlier experience in an Episcopal Church, the Chicago Church, was welcoming and had a Lesbian rector. (Things do change.)

He said, “I learned from the people there that you can be an Episcopalian, you can be a part of that church and you can be open, and affirmative and welcoming. It has been the end of my spiritual journey in many respects because I have come back to where I started but I have come back whole.”

He said that has been important to him as a person but also because of what he does. As a person who goes out and advocate for Gays and Lesbians.....a lot of times the opposition to these pieces of legislation and policies comes from the conservative religious community, particularly the Roman Catholic Church in Chicago—one of the biggest forces against some of the pro equality legislation there.

“So it is very important for me to have a place where I can go and know that religious communities support equality and are welcoming of Gay and Lesbian people so I can take that message and not only talk to folks in the GLBT Community but talk to folks who are people of faith and people who believe in God. I can talk to them with the language they speak about why they need to support and why they need to be welcoming of Gay and Lesbian people....”

He said that places like The Gathering are important because they are the bridge between the progressive community and the conservative religious community.

Mullen said, “It is people like us here who learn the language of faith and can go out and talk about things that we believe in to people of faith.”

Cincinnati’s GLSEN Chapter launches ‘Stories Project’

By Jen Short

GLSEN Greater Cincinnati (Gay, Lesbian & Straight Education Network) recently launched the ‘Stories Project’, an oral history documentary project that will archive school experiences around sexual orientation and gender identity and expression in the Greater Cincinnati area.

The first phase of the project is in collaboration with Public Allies Cincinnati, an Ameri-

Corps program which specializes in leadership development and community service. Phase one will focus on comparing high school experiences of two different age groups, specifically recent graduates’ experiences to those who graduated 40 or more years ago through personal, on-camera interviews.

The first video will be shown at the GLSEN Greater Cincinnati Prom on May 7 at the Contemporary Arts Center. It will share the stories of GLBT and supportive students about bullying, name-calling, school climate, shows of support and much more. After Prom, the video will be promoted on YouTube.

Kathy Laufman is GLSEN Greater Cincinnati’s board co-chair. She envisions that the ‘Stories Project’ “will show us the faces behind the GLSEN ‘Safe Schools’ mission” and “take us beyond the youth we serve currently and bring us the stories of those who suffered as youth, long before there was a GLSEN to help them.”

The Stories Project was the concept of Josh Wagoner, 29, a GLSEN Greater Cincinnati board member. Josh moved to the area before the 6th grade. He found that not only was he the “new kid” in school, he was the “new gay kid.” “I didn’t fit in at all. I was kicked and slammed into lockers. I was called a fag.” He was able to transfer to a small private school where there was a better environment. “Although never a supportive word about being Gay was said, it was a safer place because it was less volatile.” About creating this idea, he said “I initially thought of the ‘Stories Project’ concept about two years ago, but it sat on the shelf.” In light of the media attention surrounding Gay teen suicides within the last year, the timing was right to push the project.

The concept was pitched to Public Allies Cincinnati and selected as a service project. Public Allies member Alessandra Hernandez, 26, explained that this project was selected because it is sustainable and relevant to today’s issues. “Considering [recent teen suicides], we felt this project

By Nate Wessel

"I don't like Gay people" says a Gay friend of mine to me, Gay myself, "they're materialistic and catty, and vain, and we don't have anything in common."

I am taken aback. I try to argue, but make no ground. They "just aren't [his] kind of people" he says. To the casual observer, this seems reasonable. Everyone is not going to like everyone of course, and that itself is indeed a reasonable assumption.

But I see something darker in this sentiment which claims it's dim home in more than a few of my acquaintances.

Not actively enjoying the company of some particular GLBT people is fine, but GLBT people are not a single person that one can have a distaste for. GLBT people are as diverse as any large category of people, and to say that one does not like a large diverse category of people is to say that one is intolerant and prejudiced.

To be clear, Gay men are not the first people who haven't liked GLBT folks, but they are for me perhaps the most irritating. So often I hear this "I'm Gay, but I'm not that kind of Gay" line, with "that kind of Gay" always meaning "the sort of low-class fags who don't know how to act like real-men."

When Gay men assert a masculine homosexual identity that is not only in contrast, but in opposition to a non-normative gender expression that they conflate with gayness itself, they are not only shooting themselves in the foot, they are shooting the rest of our feet as well.

We seem to have reached an interesting point in time where for many men, to be homosexual is perfectly fine, but to be Gay—really, really Gay—is completely taboo. One can come out now as a man who doesn't want to be associated with "all those fairies at the Gay bar". And while this seems to be a huge improvement on the repression of both sexuality and gender that many of our GLBT elders can recall, must we really take one huge step back now that we have come so far forward?

Can we not simultaneously celebrate our sexuality and our freedom from gender oppression?

My advice to the reader is that the next time you hear some jerk at the bar harass a drag queen for being "too Gay" splash your cosmo (or beer) in his face and politely tell him to get a clue because he's not only hurting the perception of his own identity, but yours as well.

Forever humbled

I am post Gay. It is hard for me to get excited about dinner parties and corporate sponsors or the latest self appointed and organizationally appointed leader. A lifetime of those gala events has taught me there is little connection between society mavens and those who do the work.

Perhaps, I should read the society page more, but I have been ruined by activism and sacrifice past.

I saw the events of Kent State as a student on May 4, 1970; I saw Whoopi Goldberg push a wheelchair of a dying man with HIV at the front of the March on Washington in '87 and heard

Jesse Jackson at the same event in '93.

Like many, I fought my battles in the workplace – P & G. I was out before there was a GABLE or an EEO policy that at least spoke the words of equal opportunity. Simply being on a gay radio show or cable TV, commercial TV or in the local press in those days was "radical" for a P & G'er.

Folks seldom hear me recite those moments of great challenge and yes victory in my past life. In doing so, I must remember events and individuals that changed me.

Imagine all those faces of people who died of a then unknown virus, ordinary folks many like you and me. I remember some would come to pride events and pride meetings suffering – clearly showing signs of an active HIV infection. Determined in facing their end heroically through participation in a community that was sometimes uncomfortable with their illness, they said, "my life has value and my contribution is worthy." Most never got a leadership award for their sacred sacrifice.

These words will not stop others from rewriting history, nor will it stop those who are less than curious about the past or too lazy to do the research. It will not stop those who equate leadership to a narrow band of elites either based on income, appearance, or a keen fashion sense.

As a loud mouthed queen such as I am, forgive me all for having what blood left in me boil or what tears left I have to shed for those who really lead by example, by work.

I knew some of those folks and I am forever humbled.

This publication is dedicated to those who have or have died from AIDS or Hate Crimes

It is our goal to record the positive contributions GLBT people make to their community and the local community at large. While AIDS and Hate CRIMES are certainly not positive things, we seek to draw the positive from the negative. We hold up Paul Delph and Matthew Shepard and their families as models of how human beings should or could react to each other and how families should support loved ones whose lives are not in the box right wing religious zealots want them in. Delph, a multi-talented Cincinnati, died of AIDS in 1996. His mother shut down her business to care for him. Shepard died in 1998, victim of a hate crime and his mother worked for years to get passed a national Hate Crimes Bill, which is now law.

Mullen said that when they were working on the civil union bill that recently passed in the Illinois legislature they held a press conference the week before the bill was passed and had 300 religious leaders from around the state sign a petition supporting the bill and had five religious leaders from different faiths come and speak on behalf of the bill. “That was one of the strongest things we did to counter the opposition to that bill.” Opposition was based mostly on religious grounds.

GLBT News asked Mullen several questions prior to the church service.

Why did you leave Illinois to accept the Quality Ohio position?

I am thrilled to be the new Executive Director of Equality Ohio. I accepted the position because I believe that my experience as a civil rights litigator and activist will enable me to be an effective advocate for the LGBT community throughout Ohio. I believe strongly in full equality and inclusion for the LGBT community, and states like Ohio are ripe for significant pro-equality advances in the near future. I look forward to leading our community on the statewide level as we advocate for pro-equality legal and social advances.

How will your background help here?

My background as a civil rights lawyer has given me the skills necessary to communicate a strong case for LGBT equality and legal protections to a wide audience. In addition, my role advocating for legal and public policy changes in Illinois for the disability and LGBT communities, including the Illinois Civil Union Bill, has given me the legislative advocacy skills to communicate with legislators and other government officials, and to navigate legislation through the General Assembly. Finally, my broad experience with a range of LGBT organizations, as a volunteer, board member and supporter, has given me an understanding of the role of organizations like Equality Ohio in our movement.

What are your priorities? Long-term plans?

The mission of Equality Ohio is to achieve full equality and inclusion for the LGBT community in Ohio. In the near term, Equality Ohio will be advocating for both the Equal Housing and Employment Act and Safe School Act in the Ohio General Assembly. In addition, I will be doing outreach around the state to ensure that Equality Ohio truly represents the interests of the LGBT community in all corners of the state. Similarly, I would like to increase outreach to the Transgender community, racial and ethnic minorities, seniors and youth. We are much stronger when we work together as a community with a unified purpose.

In the long term, full equality includes equal marriage rights, and Equality Ohio will advocate for this right and work with activists around the state to bring the freedom to marry to Ohio. Full equality also means social equality, a state where young LGBT people are not afraid of being thrown out of their home if they come out, a state where seniors are not afraid to come out to nursing service providers so they can get the type of care they deserve, where Transgender people don't fear being the victims of violent crime, and where racial and ethnic minorities are able to live openly in their communities and worship openly in their churches. That is the state Equality Ohio will work tirelessly to achieve.

How does EO help the GLBT Community?

Equality Ohio is actually three separate organizations that engage in education and outreach, lobbying, and political activities. The education and outreach arm aims to change the hearts and minds of folks in Ohio who are not now pro-equality. We have done that, and continue to do that, through public speaking at churches, schools and other venues, collecting “our stories” from our community and sharing them publicly, and educating service providers on the needs of the LGBT community. The lobbying arm aims to educate and persuade legislators to vote in favor of pro-equality legislation (and as importantly against anti-equality legislation). We do that by organizing an annual Lobby Day (May 18 this year), arranging for LGBT and allied leaders to make in-district visits to legislators throughout the year, and by providing the facts to support the need for pro-equality legislation. The political arm of Equality Ohio seeks to elect pro-equality state legislators and officers by fund-raising for pro-equality candidates and educating and mobilizing voters.

Ultimately, Equality Ohio seeks to make sure that our community is at the table, is heard, and is listened to when decisions are made at the state-wide level.

Why are you in Cincinnati and who are you meeting with here?

I am in Cincinnati because I believe it is important for Equality Ohio to represent the LGBT community throughout the state. I am attending the HRC Dinner on Saturday night where I hope to meet a lot of committed LGBT activists and allies, including many who have been strong supporters of Equality Ohio. I am appearing on the Alternating Currents radio show Saturday and speaking at the Gathering UCC church Sunday. I have reached out to a number of LGBT leaders in Cincinnati and hope to meet some of them throughout the day on Saturday.

This is not a “one and done” trip to be sure. I plan to be in Cincinnati frequently and would like to plan a community meeting next time I am in town to meet a broader cross section of the LGBT community. I also encourage folks who are interested to reach out to me at ed@equalityohio.org or 614-224-0400.

How can GLBT citizens and organizations here help EO?

Equality Ohio welcomes support from the community in any form! To find out more and to become a member of Equality Ohio, go to www.equalityohio.org, where you can sign up for our mailing list and become a member. The most important annual event is Lobby Day, May 18th. You can come to our training in Cincinnati, come up to Columbus for our Lobby Day program, and help your legislators understand the importance of supporting our community. Also, if you are on Facebook, join our page and get instant updates and information relevant to the LGBT community in Ohio and become a part of the often vibrant discussion on that page.

In conclusion

LGBT equality is on the move around the country — at the federal level with repeal of DADT and the Obama administration's recent announcement that it will no longer defend DOMA, in Hawaii and Illinois with the passage of civil unions, and in Maryland with the imminent passage of equal marriage, to mention just some recent advances. We have momentum, and this is the time to push harder, be more vocal and adamant about our equality, and not relent until we achieve all we deserve as a community. I truly hope our community will take this opportunity now and work with me, Equality Ohio, and all of the great Cincinnati organizations to move us forward.

Drondockette

Another of my miscellaneous duties was given to me by my new boss, Captain Case. The position of the Post Fire Marshal became less and less of a responsibility as we turned over more and more of our facilities back to the French. This was the 1960s and a time when the French were considering getting out of NATO and Charles DeGaulle was on a bit of a rampage. I was a bit surprised when he handed me the keys to the Fire Marshal's Sedan and a brand new Fireman's helmet. "Guess what you are now?" he said with glee in his voice. "You are now Drondockette Niner Five".

I said, "Drondockette! What's that?" That turned out to be the radio call sign for the Fire Marshall. It seemed my

Georgia on My Mind
 By Georgia W Dahlberg

new appointment had a new set of responsibilities with it. I was responsible to go to each and every fire we had on any of our bases. I had never heard of any taking place in the year or so I had been there but we did have a base fire department. The Fire Department was known as Drondockette one. I was responsible to let them know my whereabouts at all times from then on. What fun! Boo Hoo! I could, however, call them up and tell them where I was and where they could reach me.

Young Lieutenants get bored and the same movies always seemed to be playing for a week or two at our base movie theater. One night, five or so of my friends pounded on my door urging me to come with them to a new movie playing at a neighboring base, Etain, a mere 10 or so miles away. I said, "Rats, guys, I'm the new Fire Marshal and have to stay in touch with the Fire Department all night." Then I thought about that nice roomy Army Ford sedan dedicated to my use! "But...we could go over there in the Fire Marshal's car. I just need to call in where I am on the radio!" Away we went over to my office and all hopped in the big old olive drab sedan with my fireman's hat in the back.

I have no idea where the Drondockette came from and no idea what it meant. It certainly left all these lieutenants in stitches when I called in over the radio, "Drondockette One, this is Drondockette Niner Five; going to Etain base and I'll call you when I get there". I became known as "Drondockette Niner Five" to all my friends from then on. The question that night seemed to be who were all the other little Drondockettes? Ahhh, one of life's more difficult questions to ponder. After everybody tried on my Fireman's hat, I as the driver had it placed backwards on my head for the trip to Etain. What a distinguished bunch!

It was a dark summer night as we drove over the hills, out of Verdun proper, towards Etain. Whoever was in the front seat with me noticed the siren and flashing light controls. "Do these work?" I'd never tried them and of course, everybody loved the flashing lights and everybody had to try the siren. Thankfully there were few houses on that stretch of road because we would have awoken the dead along the way. I calmed this crazy bunch down enough to get through the Etain Base's gates and on to the movie theater. They all broke up again when Drondockette Niner Five called back in. After the movie, I decided not to call back in and went straight to my office before calling in for the night. The Drondockette humor apparently hadn't gotten old for them as they all hung around to hear my final radio call for the night. It was a relief when enough of the base closed to relieve me of the need to be Fire Marshal and Drondockette Niner Five signed off for the last time couldn't be ignored."

Public Allies Cincinnati is developing the project from the ground up. With the 'Stories Project', GLSEN Greater Cincinnati hopes to shed light on the climate in the area's schools then and now.

First openly Lesbian elected to Ohio General Assembly

To Advertise
513-241-7539

Representative Nickie Antonio (D-Lakewood) was inaugurated on January 3, as the first openly LGBT state level elected official.

Antonio

“Working to make Ohio an open and welcoming place for all to live, work and raise a family will take all of us working together, especially in these tough economic times. I look forward to working with Equality Ohio and my colleagues in the General Assembly to move Ohio forward. I encourage members of the LGBT Community to get involved as well, because the work for equity and fairness improves the quality of life for all and creates a stronger Ohio,” she said.

Antonio previously was elected to the at-large seat for Lakewood City Council in November of 2005, was the top-vote getter in her second election returning her to council and was serving in her second term. She chaired the Health and Human Services and the Economic Development Committees and served on the Finance Committee. She has served as a member of the Public Works, on the Lakewood Hospital Board, and was the previous chair of the Housing Committee. She also served as the council liaison to the Community Relations Advisory Commission a commission of which she was a founding member.

Antonio strived to work responsively and collaboratively in the community to improve the health, safety and viability of her city for all its citizens. She was a strong proponent of the arts as an economic catalyst and believed that civic engagement is key to building a strong and safe community.

Antonio holds a Bachelor of Science degree in Education from Cleveland State University and a Master of Public Administration degree from the Maxine Levin College of Urban Affairs at Cleveland State University. A former special education teacher, adjunct professor and non-profit administrator she has served in numerous capacities as an organizational consultant for non-profit and governmental organizations and administrator for a multi-County HIV/AIDS regional program. Antonio is the past chair of the American Cancer Society Relay for Life Event and Cuyahoga Democratic Women’s Caucus. She has been active in various civic organizations including membership in the Ohio Women’s Leadership Forum, Grow Lakewood Committee,

Lakewood Schools Fifty Years Committee, The Beck Center, LHS Athletic Boosters, Lakewood Soccer Association and Women Speak Out for Peace and Justice. She also served as chair of the Lakewood Citizens Advisory Committee for three of her four years on the committee. Past advocacy involvement included the creation of the 2003 “CommUNITY Conversations,” dialogue model that fosters neighborhood community building through positive communication and the development of a Women’s

Peace and Community Conference at Cleveland State University in 2002. In 1996 she served as United States delegate to Japan and the Philippines with the IIE program-ASIA Pacific WINGS. She is a founding member and past Chair of the NorthCoast HIV/AIDS Coalition, past President of the Greater Cleveland Chapter of the National Organization for Women, and former board member of the Domestic Violence Center. Daughters Ariel and Stacey, both Lakewood High School graduates, have made Nickie and partner Jean Kosmac very proud as the girls engage in their post-secondary pursuits.

Our Faith Too!

National MCC leader named to Presidential Advisory Council

The Rev. Elder Nancy Wilson, presiding moderator of the Universal Fellowship of Metropolitan Community Churches, has been named by President Barack Obama to serve on the White House Advisory Council on Faith-Based and Neighborhood Partnerships.

The White House Advisory Council brings together leaders and experts in the fields of faith-based and neighborhood organizations to work in the Office of Faith-Based and Neighborhood Partnerships, which mobilizes and coordinates community organizations, religious and otherwise, to provide effective social services to address the needs of low income and underserved populations at home and abroad.

"I am deeply honored and grateful for this opportunity to serve," said Rev. Wilson.

Elder Nancy Wilson

"This is a wonderful opportunity to seek common ground and shared purpose with a broad spectrum of the religious and social service communities, and an opportunity to transcend lines of religious and political affiliation as we seek sustainable solutions to the needs of the vulnerable.

"It is my hope," she continued, "that, as our President has stated so eloquently on many occasions, our varied beliefs will together forge our common strength."

Metropolitan Community Churches applauds the President's selection of one of the nation's leading religious figures in the LGBT community. Known both for her pastoral skills as well as her public advocacy, Rev. Wilson has pastored many of MCC's congregations, including its founding church, and for more than 20 years was the denomination's Chief Ecumenical Officer, representing MCC at the National and World Council of Churches.

She continues to be an active voice on behalf of HIV and AIDS issues, prison reform, LGBT human rights efforts, and the rights of women and children.

Rev. Wilson is a graduate of Allegheny College and holds the Master of Divinity degree from SS. Cyril and Methodius Seminary. She is currently a doctoral candidate at the Episcopal Divinity School in Cambridge, Massachusetts.

The President's Advisory Council on Faith-Based and Neighborhood Partnerships brings together religious and secular leaders as well as scholars and experts in fields related to the work of faith-based and neighborhood organizations in order to make recommendations to the government on how to improve partnerships.

President Obama said, "I am pleased to announce that these experienced and committed individuals have agreed to join this Administration, and I look forward to working with them in the months and years ahead."

NKU Senior Melanie Buchanan amazes us with her stunning photos, drawing a buzz of emotion that might leave you daydreamy. She has made an impact on society with involvement in the community, taking photos of Senior Citizens at a home. This reminds her that you can bring a smile to a stranger who needs some fun. After graduation in May, she plans to begin a new focus on Travel Photography. Maybe even on a cruise ship. Call Mel at 502-767-9257

DANCE NIGHT

MUSICIANS & DJs ON STAGE 7P-2A

Photographer Joey Kim came from Cali to the Dayton, Ohio area 5 years ago and began his studies in Graphic Design and Photography at UD, as it had always been his passion to capture emotions for print. Joey is a proud member of the GLBT Community, and loves incorporating these themes in his work. While his interests focus on fashion shots, his dream career would land him taking photos for magazines and publications. Contact Joey @ 937-829-1779

When Songwriter Shawn Pennick of N. Kentucky was five he was a lead singer in his family's band the Harmon Family Quartet. At 17, he picked up a guitar to realize his dreams of making his own music. By 20, he was signed by Abbey Road Records of Nashville, and created recordings with a music video. Shawns talents earned him a full ride at Eastern Kentucky University with a focus in voice. Now his dance music LP has taken him to labels which will put his next step in The Big Apple. Contact 502-693-6795
